

Rutgers Football Flunks Profit Test As Students Must Pay $1,000

INTERACTIVE GRAPHIC BY CHLOE WHITEAKER | MAY 2, 2012 6:30 PM |

1 COMMENT \(HTTP://GO.BLOOMBERG.COM/MULTIMEDIA/RUTGERS-ATHLETICS/#DISQUS_THREAD\)

Rutgers gave $28.5 million from the university budget and student fees to sports during the fiscal year ended June 30, 2011. That worked out to almost $1,000 a student. It was the largest amount among 54 public institutions in the six main organizations that compete in college football's Bowl Championship Series: the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big 12, Big 10, Pac-12 and Southeastern conferences. The findings are based on annual reports by the universities to the National Collegiate Athletic Association that were obtained by Bloomberg through open-records requests.

- Conference comparison
- Cost to students & school

Conference comparison

Rutgers athletic department gets more money from the university and students than any other school surveyed by Bloomberg News. Filter the results below by type of support.

Choose a type of support

1 – Government support refers to state, municipal, federal and other government appropriations made in support of the operations of intercollegiate athletics.

2 – Indirect university support includes the value of facilities and services provided by the institution not charged to athletics, such as grounds maintenance.

Student fees appropriated to athletics

